

Basic Detail Report

Dish

Date

ca. 1750

Primary Maker

Artist Unknown

Medium

porcelain and overglaze enamel

Description

The reticulation on the rim appears to be hand applied rather than produced in a mold. It is unclear if this dish was used as an underplate for a similarly designed complementary bowl or simply intended to be a decorative tour de force. The reticulation is decorated overall with small rosettes and the floral theme is continued in the center of the dish.
